AWARD-WINNING FLOORPLANS FOR EVERY BUDGET

J. G. E. C. J. E.

Plan, Build & Live Your Dream

Easy Affordable

Ways to Build a Dream Home

SPECIAL SECTION: Dazzling Master Bedrooms

Our guide to creating a gorgeous hearth

How to design amazing storage space for kitchens & more

6 essential tips for choosing floors

PAGE 62

FEBRUARY 2008 WEST REGION
S4 . 99US $5 . 99C AN
O 2>

$4.99US $5.99CAN 0.2>

please recycle this magazine

home of the month

Best of Both Worlds

An Idaho log-and-timber beauty showcases an innovative design that blends seamlessly into the rugged mountain landscape.

story by Holly Smith | photography by Roger Wade | styling by Deborah Grahl

im Schafer doesn't climb mountains—he builds around them. As an architect, he finds ways to fit gloriously designed homes into spots where Mother Nature might have other ideas. Such was the case with a recent customer who wanted his 2,800-square-foot getaway home nestled into Idaho's Tamarack ski area.

"We were able to come up with a design without a lot of steps or level changes," says Tim, who works at Mountain Architects, the design firm for PrecisionCraft Log & Timber Homes. "It's kind of a long and narrow home because of the lot." But the house, known as Eagle's Nest, works wonderfully and looks as if it's been perched on this spot for more than a century.

Beau Value, owner and president of Everest Construction, says the owner of Eagle's Nest wanted the place to look like no other. Judging by the unique log-and-timber stunner that resulted, it's clear the customer got exactly what he wanted.

Working with a design and materials from PrecisionCraft, Beau and his team were able to complete the four-bedroom, four-and-ahalf-bathroom home in just 14 months, despite heavy snow during a particularly severe winter.

The pre-construction design process, though, took a little longer than usual.

"It was a difficult site to fit," says Beau of the home's sloping corner lot near a mountain switchback. "There's a road that goes by the site to access several homes at higher elevations, so we wanted to set the house on the slope. But we also wanted to protect the place so it felt private and not exposed to the road."

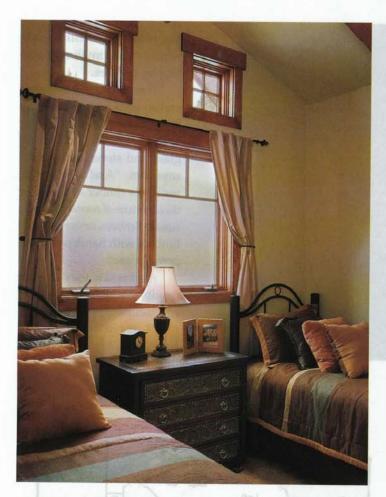

The solution, explains Tim, was to work with the challenging landscape, not against it. By adopting such a practical approach, they succeeded in tweaking one of PrecisionCraft's standard layouts, the Eagle's Nest plan from their Western Log & Timber series, to accommodate the site.

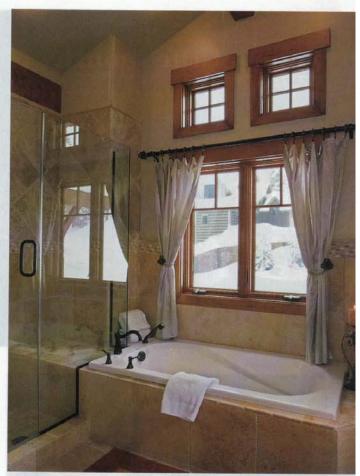

The home is equally striking inside, combining all the rustic beauty of heavily adzed, square Douglas fir logs with the elegance of squared timbers. Adding to the eclectic look, the place also boasts natural stone inside and out, vertical board-and-batten exterior sid-center stage even in a bathroom, where its earthy glamour brings a dose of the outdoors to the otherwise cosmopolitan space. A soaking tub and separate shower and prove that practical and posh needn't be mutually exclusive.

NATURAL COMFORT (CLOCK-WISE FROM ABOVE): Upscale yet understated, the furnishings in the home's bedrooms complement—rather than compete with the sophisticated timber accents surrounding them. Intentionally left muted, the colors on the walls and ceilings allow the wood to shine.

TIMBER HIDEAWAY: Nowhere do the Douglas fir trusses appear more striking than from the loft. Seeming to frame the natural-stone fireplace and angular windows across the great room, the timbers—all heavily adzed—bring an additional dash of grandeur to an already magnificent space.

ing, plentiful Craftsman-style windows and inviting, guest-worthy porches.

This mélange of materials and styles is fairly typical in a PrecisionCraft home. "We try to incorporate a good mix of glass and stone and wood," says Tim. "And quite often, we'll mix timber and logs, or do a mixture of round logs with square timbers, or even square timbers with handcrafted, tapered posts."

And when they do, the results are nothing short of spectacular.

"I haven't seen another home in the Tamarack area like this," says Beau. "It has such a nice, cozy feel."

Bunk

COZY NIGHT'S REST (TOP): Understated bedroom furnishings, including crimson window treatments and a bed as sturdy as a draft horse, match the rustic harmony found throughout the home.

HINTS OF TIMBER (ABOVE): Honey-colored wood frames the master bathroom's mirror and windows, offering a visual connection with the home's Douglas fir logs.

home details

SQUARE FOOTAGE: 2,800

BUILDER: EVEREST CONSTRUCTION

LOG PROVIDER: PRECISIONCRAFT LOG & TIMBER HOMES

FOR MORE INFORMATION, SEE RESOURCES ON PAGE 89

Loft

WIC

Open to Below

